- 2018-2023 Scientific Study of Worship Exemplars, Pasadena, CA
Collaborator with Alexis Abernethy, Ph.D.
The current study is a qualitative exploration of exemplar worship leaders.
- 2011-2015 Wellness and Resilience Research Lab, Alhambra, CA
Principle Investigator & Lab Developer
The mission of WRRL is to conduct research that targets historically underrepresented ethnic populations from a strength based theoretical model, in efforts to understand issues related to wellness and resilience. Part of the vision of the lab is to provide research skills and training to graduate students of color. The lab provides opportunities for women of color to become proficient in research. A distinct mentorship model is utilized that supports the holistic personal and professional development of these emerging scholars. Collaboration is utilized to develop protocols, conceptualize projects, define research goals, solicit funding, and support presentations, papers, and publications. Projects include:
- ~ Professional African American women and work-life balance (qualitative)
 - ~ Professional African American women and wellness
 - ~ Research mentorship of women of color
 - ~ Strategies to enhance mentorship of graduate women of color
- 2008-2012 UCLA Community Collaboration Research Project, Westwood, CA
Research Collaborator & Advisory Board Member
This partnered project protocol was approved by the RAND Corporation IRB. Participated in conceptualizing the issue addressing premature mortality in Black men. Defined broad goals through a "VISIONing" process. Developed the common theme to explore factors associated with the transition to manhood for young, Black men in Los Angeles area. Participated in gathering the data and interpreting the findings.
- ~African American Men Photovoice Project (qualitative)
- 2000-2005 Fuller Theological Seminary Graduate School of Psychology

The focus of this research lab is on international trauma and related issues.

Responsibilities include collaborative efforts on literature review, data entry, data analysis, and compilation of findings, etc. Currently completing training module for those working with children exposed to violence.

Research Practicum

Research Assistant: (2000-2001)

Worked on various research projects pertaining to trauma and violence, including conducting literature reviews, data entry, data analysis, compilation of findings, and peer review of journal articles.

1999-2003 Fuller Theological Seminary Graduate School of Psychology
Spirituality and Health Research Lab

Collaborator (2000-2003)

Spirituality in Women of African Descent

Research group is in early stages seeking to understand the relationship between spirituality and health in African American Women. In first phase, I assisted in compiling the literature review. The second phase consisted of running a focus group and creating a questionnaire that we passed out assessing what is essential to their spirituality.

Research Assistant: (1999-2002)

Religiousness & Prostate Screening in African American Men

Participated as a community liaison and aid in the collection of data from over 500 African American men in a randomized control study looking at how a standard vs. cultural specific program impacts their decision to have consistent prostate screening. Current research indicates that African American men are more likely to get prostate cancer it is our hypothesis that the culture specific program will be more influential in men getting screening. This project was spread over a two-year period, had three phases, and was fully funded by the California Cancer Research Program.

1998-1999 HRI Trauma Institute, Brookline, MA

Research Assistant

Conduct background research for current projects. Participate in interviewing and assessing adults with Posttraumatic Stress Disorder. Review and gather data of patients in our clinical trial study of Prozac, under the direction of PI Bessel van der Kolk, MD.
